Medvarsity students to get a one-year subscription to publications from Wolters Kluwer

Hyderabad-based Medvarsity and Netherlands headquartered Wolters Kluwer have joined hands to create a revolution in the healthcare education sector in India. The online course content for Medvarsity Fellowship courses has been redesigned to leverage relevant information from Wolters Kluwer's Ovid platform. Additionally, students enrolled in these courses will also get a year-long subscription to core clinical books and a multi-speciality medical journal database from Wolters Kluwer. The books and journals offer working physicians the ability to stay up to date on the latest disease guidelines.

Ruchi Tushir, VP & GM, Wolters Kluwer Global Growth Markets said, "The collaboration with Medvarsity helps us further that, by increasing access to impactful evidence-based research and books, keeping them up to date to advance decision making."

Gerald Jaideep, CEO, Medvarsity said, "All Medvarsity students will now get a one-year subscription to publications from Wolters Kluwer when they upskill with a Fellowship course from Medvarsity. This includes their peer-reviewed medical journals and clinical books in medicine spanning a breadth of healthcare specialities. The content will be mapped to each of the courses to allow an enhanced learning experience for the user.
