Burst Biologics joins hands with Adventist Health System

14 January 2019 | News

With new distribution opportunities, a prominent portfolio of products, and support from industry experts, Burst Biologics is a promising partner for a distributor business

US based Burst Biologics enters a new partnership with Adventist Health System, a faith-based health care organization centered on quality, safety, and patient satisfaction. This relationship will give distributors with Burst Biologics reliable access to a large number of surgical hospitals without the need to contract with each one at a local level.

Adventist Health System has a heavy presence in Florida, Texas, and South Carolina. The organization includes a network with an estimated 41 owned hospital affiliates, 5 non-owned affiliates, and 481 owned ambulatory care centers. Burst Biologics plans to utilize the partnership to contract with new distributors throughout the network.

"We're looking forward to our partnership with Adventist Health System. This represents a tremendous benefit to our surgical product distributors and surgeons, and at the same time helps more patients gain access to our cutting-edge neurosurgical technologies," said Christopher D. Jones, CEO of Burst Biologics.

Burst Biologics is committed to expanding its distribution network and plans to establish additional relationships with group purchasing organizations (GPOs). Burst also supports its distributors with a range of marketing materials and peer-reviewed research studies.
