"Technology can make healthcare access more convenient"- Kaushik Sen

17 June 2020 | Views

Kaushik Sen, Co-Founder & CEO, Healthspring, Mumbai talks about how his company is contributing to the ongoing COVID-19 fight.

"The coronavirus outbreak has put all of us in a state of shock and has resulted in us changing how we handle things. Customers now want to engage in minimal human contact, and we have witnessed an upsurge in tele-consultation even for regular health check-ups. Going forward, technology and tele-consultation will play a crucial role in the constant and remote monitoring of health. It will also segregate emergency and non-emergency cases which will in turn, ease the burden on the healthcare infrastructure. This will ensure that healthcare access is more widespread and convenient.

Healthspring has announced the deployment of new age technology to deliver excellent longitudinal care in the post-COVID era. Healthspring will create a robust platform for Artificial Intelligence and Remote patient Management to redefine the future of healthcare in India and be part of the ‘New Normal’."
