Lupin launches learning platform Sciflix for students

01 December 2021 | News

The platform specialises in pulmonology

Mumbai-based pharma firm Lupin has announced the launch of Sciflix, an educational mobile adaptable website for medical students who are pursuing post-graduation with chest specialisation.

Curated by Lupin for clinical enhancement, Sciflix is a comprehensive learning platform in pulmonology where all scientific needs of postgraduate students will be addressed by a multisource library under one roof.

Rajeev Sibal, President, India Region Formulations, Lupin said, “With Sciflix, we strive to make it easier for students pursuing pulmonology to access the latest research and medical innovations at the touch of their fingertips. Lupin has curated the full range of current evidence-based content to aid doctors in their clinical decision making and as a result, improve patient outcomes.”

The mobile compatible website can be accessed by both android and apple devices by medical students across the country for free.
