

IAFM organises first conference to spread awareness about functional medicine in India

21 December 2021 | News

With the objective of promoting the usage of functional medicines in our day to day lives

The first of its kind Indian Association of Functional Medicine (IAFM) organised a virtual conference to promote and spread awareness on Functional Medicines in India.

The Indian Association of Functional Medicine in India, an independent body launched its first conference with the objective of promoting the usage of functional medicines in our day to day lives and reducing the dependency on other medicines that act on the symptom and subside the overall problem in a person's body than acting on the actual underlying problem that needs to be fixed.

Founded by Dr Priti Nanda Sibal, CEO & Founder, Mediskool Health Services, Dr Anish Musa, Founder, Ultrawellness, Dr Ashwini Garg, Co-Founder, Functional Medicine Clinic & Dr Ruhi Agarwal, Co-Founder, Functional Medicine Clinic are the pillars for Indian Association of Functional Medicine in India.

The conference showcased leading doctors and spokesperson across the functional medicinal fraternity that spoke about gut disorders and autoimmunity, Hashimoto Thyroiditis, Ozone therapy, metabolic health, lifestyle choices, mental health, and hypothyroidism that gave the audience of over 400 people a deep insight into the world and functionalities of functional medicines.

The Indian Institute of Functional Medicine plans to further expand operations in India, promote and further intensify functional medicines in India by spreading more and more awareness.