On Women’s Day, in conversation with Khushboo Sandhu, Customer Experience Manager, Janani

What were the major challenges faced in 2021- on the professional and personal front, and how did you overcome those?

Everyone says that a startup is a full-time commitment, but they don't tell you that you'd be giving up a major chunk of your personal life. Janani started with a dream to build something that changes the landscape of fertility healthcare in India as we know it, so naturally, it was a huge challenge at first. I was in charge of administration, sales, marketing, content - you name it, I've done it. It got difficult to take some time out for myself, to relax or even handle things on the home front. There were days when I'd come home wanting to almost give up, but our dream and our vision kept me going. I knew it was going to be worth it and here we are. I guess when you have a strong motive, no matter how hard the journey gets or how many challenges are thrown at you, nothing in the world can bring you down.

Any take-home message for all women achievers in the life sciences/ healthcare sector?

You're all sheroes, and you're setting a breathtaking example for all the women out there. Even if the odds are stacked against you, keep going. A generation of strong and powerful women is just what the world needs right now. When I joined Janani, I did not know if I had it in me but we're all born with it. So to each one of you who has even the slightest doubt, you're doing great and you will make wonderful things happen.
