Founder Speaks-

"Currently if you have a look into the digital platforms that have been created in terms of Yoga, most of them are purely focussed on Yoga as a form of 'movement'. That's why they stress mostly on doing asanas of all kinds. However, what they are missing mostly is the fact that most of the diseases are psychosomatic in nature which originate in the mind and then spread to the body. We are looking at healing a person holistically, wherein the healing should happen at the mental level and then flow into the body, and that's where we differ from most platforms currently. The unique offering that we have is – we are focussing on health and all the kinds of mental, emotional and physical problems that lead to health disorders and we are looking at removing all of these from its root cause and that's why our health programs are very unique. Technology would be a huge enabler for us to assess the problem that people are having. It will also be a distribution channel for us to reach masses across the world. Apart from Yogasanas, we would also be having the right food to eat, right meditations, right affirmations and multiple arrays of different kinds of therapies to heal the user problem."
