The centre will support the company's growing business with cutting-edge technology solutions that define future transformation

Impelsys and Laerdal Medical have announced the launch of a new world-class Software Development Centre in the central business district of Bengaluru.

The centre was launched by Dr CN Ashwath Narayan, the Minister of Information Technology - Biotechnology, Higher Education, Science and Technology, Skill Development and Entrepreneurship & Livelihood of Karnataka, India.

The centre will support the company's growing business with cutting-edge technology solutions that define future transformation. The modern center is equipped with the best-in-class IT infrastructure, robust security, and sustainability standards.

"The Software Development Centre reflects our fruitful relationship with Impelsys. The center will be instrumental in our mission to help save lives through enabling technologies for time-critical emergencies. I am excited about the cutting-edge technology solutions that we will develop together. I look forward to a long-term partnership with Impelsys," said Alf-Christian Dybdahl, CEO of Laerdal Medical.
