Healthcare is about human resources, which constitute 60-80% of the cost of healthcare delivery: Dr Rajendra Pratap Gupta

Digital Health Associates (DHA) have signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the Association of Healthcare Providers (India) (AHPI). Under this collaboration, Digital Health Associates shall work as the digital health upskilling partner for AHPI and its members.

DHA will jointly work for internship opportunities with AHPI member organisations, and this collaboration will also entail the two organisations working on workshops, research, and publications.

This collaboration will play a pivotal role in leveraging the global expertise of Digital Health Associates to help organisations and clinicians develop the digital skills needed in the 21st century.

As per the current scenario of the overall healthcare system in the country, healthcare organisations are developing in many aspects and do not have any exposure or expertise in digital healthcare, and digital health will play a major role in making healthcare accessible and outcome driven.

Digital Health Associates is founded by the world's foremost leader in Digital Health and former advisor to the Health Minister of India, Dr Rajendra Pratap Gupta. On the other hand, AHPI is a "not for profit" organisation and advocates with the government, regulatory bodies, and other stakeholders on issues that have a bearing on enabling its members organisation to deliver appropriate healthcare services to the community at large.
