Shearwater Health, a leader in clinician-led clinical solutions for healthcare partners, has announced its expansion into India with the opening of a new office in Chennai, a key hub for healthcare and technology expertise.

This Chennai-based expansion is anticipated to create 1,000 jobs for local clinicians by the end of 2025, who will deliver high-quality remote clinical services to Shearwater's US healthcare clients.

As part of its global offerings, Shearwater offers clinical experts following Six Sigma processes to drive exceptional outcomes for its clients' patients.

"Our expansion into India allows us to broaden our service offerings with a wide range of skillsets across multiple countries," said Giri Namala, Chief Growth Officer of Shearwater Health. "By establishing a diverse talent pool in key markets, we can offer our clients greater flexibility and choice in meeting their unique needs. India's skilled professionals complement our capabilities in the Philippines and the US, enabling us to provide comprehensive solutions that drive impactful outcomes."

In addition to Shearwater Health's new offerings for healthcare providers in India, its global team of highly skilled clinical experts will recruit and train new talent within the region, creating new jobs in the market as well as international opportunities for nurses who are interested in working in the US. Factors that impacted the company's decision to expand into Chennai included top-tier talent and the growing business and healthcare community across the region, according to a report from KPMG.
