Cent raises $15 M in Series A round to build full-stack preventive health platform for India

27 October 2026 | News

Completed 10,000 preventive whole-body scans across Bengaluru, Mumbai and Delhi since inception

Cent, a preventive health intelligence company, has raised $15 million in its Series A round, including equity and debt, led by Blume Ventures and existing investor South Park Commons. The round also saw participation from individual investors such as Arun Sarin, former CEO of Vodafone; Srinivas Narayanan, former CTO (B2B) of OpenAI; Sharath Narayana, Krishna Sridhar and Aprameya Radhakrishna.

Cent is building a vertically integrated preventive health platform that combines purpose-built hardware, AI-driven radiology and diagnostics, and bioinformatics.

The startup has also acquired the Medsee platform, founded by Chitra Singh, an AI-powered radiology reporting workflow built for qualified medical professionals. The platform drafts structured reports and highlights findings for radiologist review, enabling Cent to deliver faster, more consistent reporting as scan volumes grow.
