BD names Rishi Grover as chief integrated supply chain officer

06 July 2022 | News

Grover has more than 20 years of experience in manufacturing and supply chain roles

BD (Becton, Dickinson and Company) announced that Rishi Grover has been named executive vice president (EVP) and chief integrated supply chain officer for BD, effective July 7, 2022.

In this role, Grover will have global responsibility for the leadership of the supply chain, operations, procurement, sustainability and Environmental, Health and Safety (EHS) teams across the company and will become a member of the BD executive leadership team.

Grover has more than 20 years of experience in manufacturing and supply chain roles, most recently serving as senior vice president of Operations for Carrier, a $20 billion company that is the leading global provider of healthy, safe, sustainable and intelligent building and cold chain solutions, with 47 manufacturing facilities around the world. In this role, he was responsible for all aspects of global operations, including lean manufacturing excellence, supply chain efficiency, operational transformation and EHS. He also led the modernisation and digitisation of Carrier's operations and processes across the company. Before Carrier's spinoff from United Technologies Corporation (UTC), Rishi served as vice president of Global Operations and Systems for Collins Aerospace and held roles of increasing responsibility at UTC Power, Hamilton Sundstrand and UTC Aerospace Systems.
